INDIANA TO TRY HOLDUP SLAYER

Ralph Lee, Wanted For Indianapolis Murder, Turned Over to Hoosier Authorities.

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 22.—Ralph Lee, alias O'Neil, alias Barr, confessed jail breaker and alleged murderer, will go to Indianapolis for trial on a murder charge. Governor Al Smith of New York so decided yesterday in signing extradition papers presented by Detective Sergeant Harry McGlenn, of Indianapolis. The governor gave Indianapolis the prisoner instead of turning him over to authorities of Nashville, Tenn., who also appeared before the chief executive in an effort to get Lee.

The alleged murderer will leave here in charge of Detectives McGlenn and Jesse McMurty. The other two men who were arrested with Lee will be turned over to the Nashville detectives. They are wanted for escaping from prison there on April 9.

Lee is wanted in Indianapolis in connection with the murder of Abner Peek, who was shot to death in his grocery store at Speedway City during a holdup July 4, 1924. He has been indicted for the crime, the detectives stated.

Arrested In Stolen Car.

The alleged murderer and his two companions were arrested here last week while riding in a stolen auto-

DR. GEO. W. CRAPO CALLED BY DEATH

Well Known Physician Dies Thursday After Long and Useful Professional Life.

Dr. George W. Crapo, 74 years old, for many years a practicing physician in Terre Haute, died at the residence, 1500 South Sixth street, at 1:15 o'clock Thursday afternoon following an extended illness which interrupted a practice beginning in 1875 and which continued successfully until he was stricken several months ago.

Dr. Crapo was born in Sullivan county, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Silas Crapo. At the age of fourteen years he accompanied his parents to Terre Haute and upon their removal here and since that time he has been a resident of the city.

Upon completing his work in the public schools, he took up the study of medicine with Dr. J. E. Link and after three years in Dr. Link's office he entered the Ohio Medical college at Cincinnati in 1873, graduating from that institution in 1875 when he began the practice of his chosen profession here.

Dr. Crapo took a prominent place in the practice of medicine and surgery and was a member of the Vigo county and Indiana State Medical societies, the Aesculapian society, the American Medical association and the Tri-State medical society. In addition to his professional work he found time to be interested in civic affairs and at one time was a member of the city council. He was a Mason and a member of the First Congregational church.

Surviving are the widow, Mrs. Florence Crapo; a daughter, Mrs Walter Hyneman, and a granddaughter, Miss Edna Hyneman.

ROBERT E. LEE.

Special To The Tribune.

BLOOMFIELD, Ind., April 28.—Friends in Bloomfield have received word of the death at Hollywood, Fla., of Robert E. Lee, who was for many years a resident of Bloomfield. A few years ago Mr. Lee moved to Jacksonville, where he was engaged as a contractor. A year ago, when Princeton and other southern Indiana towns were visited by a tornado Mr. Lee went into the stricken district and engaged in the work of rebuilding. While there he suffered from a fall, and later had an attack of influenza, and he never fully recovered. Several months ago he went to the home of his brother, John W. Lee, at Hollywood, where his death occurred. He is survived also by another brother, Ad Lee, of Indianapolis. The burial will be at Hollywood.

RHODES TAKEN TO ENTER DEATH CELL

Special To The Tribune.

VINCENNES, April 28.—Dreyfus Rhodes, bandit-murderer, who was sentenced by Judge Thomas B. Coulter of circuit court to die in the electric chair for the murder of Simon A. Carle, Vincennes policeman, was taken to Michigan City this morning by Sheriff Roy Chambers and Deputy Sheriff Harvey Smith, who left over the Pennsylvania, by way of Indianapolis.

Rhodes is resigned to his fate. He said before leaving the Knox county jail that he preferred to die to spending the remainder of his life in prison. No announcement was made as to the hour of departure of the prisoner and there was only a small group of officers and station employes on the platform when he boarded the train in company with the officers.

The slayer's mother has been here for several days and yesterday made herself conspicuous in soliciting signatures to a petition to Governor Jackson to commute her son's sentence. Rhodes is sentenced to die before sunrise on the morning of July 19.

HOOSIER SLAYER BEING BROUGHT BACK FOR TRIAL

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 28.—(AP)—Ralph Lee, alias Howard Barr, wanted in Indianapolis for trial on the charge of murdering Abner Peck, a grocer of that city, left for the Hoosier capital at 7:25 a. m. today in the custody of Detective Harry McGlenn and Jesse McMurtry.

Lee was captured here last Monday and Gov. Smith at Albany honored requisition papers forwarded from Indiana. Tennessee authorities also sought custody of Lee. He escaped recently with 16 other prisoners from state prison at Knoxville, where he was serving a term on a robbery charge.

world, his first business venture having been as a drug clerk at Mulberry, Indiana. It was then his intention to learn pharmacy there, but changing his plans, in 1883, he became a student in the Rush Medical College, and since completing his medical studies has been in active practice. He gives his political allegiance to the Republican party, and is a thirty-second degree Mason, as well as a member of the fraternal order of Elks and the Knights of Pythias (of which he is the major and surgeon of the Sixth Regiment, Uniform Rank). In 1884 Dr. Combs married Miss Anna Berger, born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and they have one daughter, Laura.

SILAS CRAPO, who was born in Coshocton county, Ohio, January 16, 1825, died on his farm in Pierson township, Vigo county, Indiana, January 24, 1907. A long life of eighty-two years was thus accorded him and his activity and enterprise made him a valued citizen of the different localities in which he resided. His parents were Reuben and Sarah (Coner) Crapo. The father was a native of Massachusetts and a farmer by occupation, thus providing for the support of his family. He died in Sullivan county, Indiana, about 1856, when about fifty-five years of age.

Silas Crapo came to Vigo county, in 1837, when a young lad of twelve years, but not long afterward accompanied his parents on their removal to Sullivan county, Indiana. He was one of a family of two sons and five daughters and was practically reared in Sullivan county, where he secured a fair education. He there studied medicine under a preceptor, becoming familiar with the Thompsonian or Eclectic methods of practice, and for a brief period followed that profession, but abandoned it to take up the occupation of farming soon after his marriage. He wedded Miss Paulina Robins, who was born in Sullivan county, January 10, 1828, a daughter of John Robins, a pioneer of Sullivan county, who was recognized as a prominent and wealthy farmer there and a man whose strong and sterling characteristics commended him to the respect, confidence and friendship of all with whom he came in contact. The death of Mrs. Crapo occurred February 24, 1906, after they had traveled life's journey together for many years, their mutual love and confidence increasing as time passed by. They were the parents of six children who reached adult age: John R., who became a physician, of Terre Haute; George W.; Sarah E., now deceased; Leona, Martha and Fannie.

It was in the year 1866 that Silas Crapo, leaving his farm in Sullivan county, removed to Terre Haute, where for twelve years he engaged in the hotel business as the proprietor of the Crapo Hotel. He made this an attractive hostelry and thereby secured a liberal support from the traveling public, so that the enterprise proved financially successful. He continued in the business until 1878, when he withdrew, and about 1883 he removed to his farm in Pierson township, upon which he made his home until his demise. His political views were in accord with the principles of Democracy and he never faltered in his support of the party. He was a Master Mason and both he and his wife were devoted members of the Methodist church. He found particular joy in the life of the farm in the close contact with nature and felt the deepest interest as he watched the miracle of growth and development in the fields. All men respected him because of his fidelity to his principles, and his congenial qualities won him the friendship of many with whom he came in contact.

GEORGE W. CRAPO, M. D., who in the practice of medicine has demonstrated his right to be classed with the representative members of the medical fraternity in Terre Haute, was born in Sullivan county, Indiana, August 31, 1852, and is a son of Silas Crapo, whose sketch is given above. The first fourteen years of his life were spent on the home farm and he then accompanied his parents on their removal to Terre Haute in 1866. Here he completed his literary education as a public school student and entered business life as a clerk in a drug store, where he remained for two years. During that time his interest in the subject of medicine was aroused and he determined to engage in its practice as a life work. He therefore studied for three years with Dr. J. E. Link as his preceptor, and in the fall of 1873 entered the Ohio Medical College at Cincinnati, graduating therefrom on the 28th of February, 1875. Locating for practice in Terre Haute he has remained here continuously since, his professional career covering a period of a third of a century. In the intervening years he has continually broadened his knowledge by reading, research and investigation, keeping at all times abreast with the profession in its advancement toward that high standard which has been set up by the leaders of the medical fraternity. He belongs to the Vigo County and the Indiana State Medical societies, the Aesculapian Medical Society of the Wabash Valley, the American Medical Association and the Tri-State Medical Society.

In 1873 Dr. Crapo was married to Miss Flora E. Dodson, of Terre Haute, and to them were born two children—one of whom is now deceased. Their daughter is Mrs. Edna Hyneman, of this city. Dr. and Mrs. Crapo hold membership in the Congregational church and are interested and active in its work. He gives his political allegiance to the Democracy and at one time was a member of the city council, but his aspiration has not been in the line of office-holding. He belongs to the Masonic fraternity and is a worthy representative of the craft. In his practice he is actuated not only by the laudable desire to gain success, but also by a humanitarian spirit, which prompts him to most effective efforts in his ministrations to his fellow men and has gained him recognition as a physician and surgeon of skill and ability.

HON. EMORY P. BEAUCHAMP.—It requires such special endowments to make a mark in the consular or diplomatic service of any great country, that the old-time nations have long organized special courses of instruction or training for those who design to assume such careers. For several years the founding of a regular college, under government auspices, has been earnestly discussed in the United States by those who are strongly impressed with the necessity of sending abroad the most creditable representatives of a country which already is a world power. Occasionally, as in the case of Emory P. Beauchamp, the talents of diplomacy seem to be inborn, and these, added to the training of his literary and professional education, made him an ideal representative of the consular service.

Mr. Beauchamp was a native of Indiana, born in Putnam county, in the town of Portland Mills, on the 28th of April, 1849. He came of worthy ancestry and parentage, and, although early evincing strong intellectual traits, was never coarsely aggressive. Having exhausted the resources of the home schools, he entered Earlham College, from which he graduated. Afterward he completed a course in the law, and came to Terre Haute with the design of making that the profession of his life. He rose rapidly both as a lawyer and a Democratic leader, his first official position being that of prosecuting attorney. In 1872, then only twenty-three years of age, Mr. Beauchamp was appointed consul to Aix-la-Chapelle, Rhenish Prussia, being the youngest man ever thus honored in the United States. His services at that post were so creditable that he was advanced to the more important consulate at Cologne, and in this capacity he met his future wife, Miss Paula Moeller, whom he married in 1877. Mr. Beauchamp was promoted still higher in the service, serving for some time as consul general to Switzerland. While a figure in this phase of public life he formed the acquaintance of many prominent Americans, as well as distinguished characters of foreign countries. He had the pleasure of numbering among his intimate friends President Grant, with whom he traveled in foreign countries, as he did with other men of international reputation. The death of this brilliant, polished, attractive and honorable gentleman occurred on the 11th of June, 1891, shortly after the celebration of his forty-second birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. Emory P. Beauchamp became the parents of three

Farrington Grove home has 'special appeal'

By Frances E. Hughes

"To us, the special appeal of our house is the fact that it has stained glass windows, leaded glass in the entrance door and handcarved posts for the stairway," says Mrs. Robert G. Evans of the eighty-seven-year-old house at 1500 South Sixth Street that she and her husband bought five years ago.

The house is one of the lovely, well-built homes located in the Farrington Grove area that is being renovated and cherished by a young couple.

To older residents of Terre Haute and to those who appreciate the fine old residences, this is an encouraging sign that these parts of the city's historical background will be preserved.

The Evanses came here in 1972 when Bob Evans assumed his position as associate professor of art, teaching sculpture, at Indiana State University. They have two children, Tyler, five and a half years old, and Hadley, three.

Mint Evans is a native Floridian and Bob is a native of Cheyenne, Wyoming, who was reared in Savannah, Georgia. Evans did his undergraduate work at the Atlanta School of Art, where he received a BFA degree. He received a fellowship from the French Government to study in Paris at the Atelier, under Stanley Hayter, in 1969-70, and then returned to Tulane University in New Orleans, where the couple lived for two years while he studied for his master's degree in art.

They came here from New Orleans.

The property on which their home was built is Lot No. 1 of Strawberry Hill, a subdivision of Lot No. 4 of Outlot No. 66 of the original town of Terre Haute. It was a land grant to Joseph Kitchell, signed by President James Monroe, in 1816. Kitchell sold it to Cuthbert and Thomas Bullitt, Jonathon Lindley, Hyacinthe Lasselle and Abraham Markle. In 1820, it was owned by the Terre Haute Company.

Then, the property was owned by Thomas W. Bullitt, who left it to his six heirs in 1825. In 1829, one of his heirs, A. C. Bullitt, sold the land to H. Atkinson, who died in 1842, leaving the property to his wife, Mary, and his son, Edward.

In 1856, Philip Kearney and his wife, Diana, bought the land and in 1890, it was sold to Josiah T. Scovall and his wife, Joanna. Scovall was a teacher of geology at Terre Haute High School (later Wiley). The Scovalls had a daughter, Zada, and a son, Robert, who was with the State Department in Russia.

It was the Scovalls who built the house. Two years later, the house and property were sold to Dr. George W. Crapo and his wife, Florence E. Crapo. Dr. Crapo deeded the house to his wife, and after his death she gave it to their son-in-law, Walter Hyneman, and daughter, Edna, for "$1.00, love and affection."

Walter and Edna Hyneman had one daughter, "little Edna", who was idolized by them and who died at an early age--about eight or 10 years old. This left the saddened and tender-hearted parents saddened for life. The couple lived with the Crapos in the house. Mrs. Crapo died first, then Dr. Crapo, and then Mrs. Hyneman.

Walter Hyneman was an invalid for several years before his death in 1966. As a young man, he had been a stockkeeper at the Havens and Geddes Department store, and later for many years, he was a travel agent for Hulman and Company.

Hyneman left the property to Melvin and Sarah Sargent, who sold it in 1968 to Robert L. Wilson, owner of Robert L. Wilson, insurance, and his wife, Patricia. It was the Wilsons who sold the house to Robert L. and Mint K. Evans.

Several years ago, before the Evanses bought the house, a barn (or what is usually referred to now as a "carriage house"), back of the house, was torn down and a garage built on the site. In this barn, Dr. Crapo had kept the fine horse and buggy which he used to make calls on patients. He and his brother, Dr. John Crapo,

Clowning around

By Frances E. Hughes

When Mint Evans turned herself into a clown to provide entertainment for the fifth birthday party of her son, Tyler, a year ago, she didn't know that her act would be so popular that it would turn into an avocation, and finally a part-time vocation for her.

But her friends were so entranced with her costume and act, as were their children, that they urged her to perform for the parties of their children.

And then other people heard about her and started to engage her as a professional clown. As well as at children's parties, she has now performed at shopping centers, where she passed out toys, and at the opening of a shoe store.

When one thinks of a clown, it is usually a male clown. Maybe it won't be a tall one but a sort of stocky one in sloppy clothes with clown makeup on his face.

Mint is an attractive young woman, five foot three, weighing 110 pounds with slender build, blue eyes and dark red hair.

She made herself a clown suit of dark blue calico print with orange designs, ruffled at the trasting orange calico print with blue designs of the same print for the neck ruffle. Over it, she wears a bright orange vest. Then, she got a red-orange wig and painted her husband's old tennis shoes with blue and orange design to wear with her outfit.

When she performs, she paints around her mouth and eyes white and makes a large red mouth and red on the end of her nose.

She doesn't just walk around and talk to the children in her role but presents a little puppet act while she keeps up a line of chatter and tells a children's story. She cuts out folded paper into what she calls a "Cootie Bug" and uses this on her hand as a puppet to illustrate her story.

"My clown act's popularity just grew like Topsy," she says of her presentation.

Mint Evans has an unusual name. She really was named for her great grandmother, whose name was Saminta. That sounded sort of complicated so it was shortened to Mint.

When she is a clown, she is called "Freckles."

Their two children, Tyler and a little girl, Hadley, three years old, join many other little boys and girls in enjoying "Mommie's act". And "Mommie" has a lot of fun seeing the expressions on the little faces before her and hearing their laughter.

both had such modes of transportation before automobiles were invented. Fred M. Crapo of Muncie, Indiana, is one of three sons of Dr. John Crapo.

Mr. and Mrs. Evans are trying to restore the house to its former state. In addition to the leaded glass in the front entrance door and the stained glass in the front "parlor" window and in the window on the landing of the front stairway, the Evanses also have bought and placed stained glass windows in the downstairs bathroom and in the kitchen.

They have taken up all the carpet, except in the hall, and have refinished the narrow-board oak floors. They made the pantry into a bathroom and kept the original serving passthrough from the original pantry to the former dining room. The parlor in the front of the house is now the living room, the former "sitting room" back of it is the dining room and the former dining room is a family room.

The kitchen is medium-sized. Upstairs, there are four bedrooms and a bath.

All of the walls have been repainted. The hand carved posts on the stairs, the bric-a-brac in one of the arches, the sliding door in another archway and the fine old oak fireplaces and mantels with green, brown and tan tiles in three of the rooms have all been preserved in good condition.

Mr. and Mrs. Evans had the exterior of the house painted beige with salmon trim, put in new trees and shrubs and put a wrought iron fence from the old Sullivan Court House across the front and part way down the north side of the house.
